Evaluation framework: Sustainable CBDRM

The below is a framework with which we will evaluate the extent to which a case of CBDRM demonstrates sustainability. The top 25 examples of sustainable CBDRM will be further analysed at regional best practice workshops.

Sustainability: the ability to be maintained at a certain rate or level or period of time

The terms used within this framework can be interpreted to fit country or community contexts. This may be particularly relevant about terms for 'sub-national DRM plans' and 'local government'.

Calculating the top 25 sustainable CBDRM examples in your region

STEP 1	Assess the cases against the criteria for sustainability. Fill in the record sheet by providing scores for each answer
STEP 2	Select the 40 cases that receive the highest scores. Send these to your RDC.
STEP 3	Gather more in depth information. Arrange interviews or exchange emails with those who submitted these case studies where necessary to help fill in gaps and decide which are stronger examples.
STEP 4	Based on this further information, select the highest scoring 25 cases. This may require some subjectivity. Where there is uncertainty which case should be selected in the final 25, consider factors such as diversity in location, political and social context, and type of activity. Send these to your RDC by March 13th.
